Let's look at each conditional to see how we use them.	Students match parts of given conditional sentences.

			Conditional Sentences. 3. Pupils in small groups distinguish between the types of Conditional sentences. Closure Through questions and answers, conclude the lesson.	The Zero Conditional We use the zero conditional to talk about permanent truths, such as scientific facts, and general habits. The structure is simple: <table border="1" data-bbox="1032 382 1330 535"><tr><td>If + present simple,</td><td>present simple.</td></tr><tr><td>50% possibility</td><td>100% certainty</td></tr></table> Here are some examples: If you heat water to 100°, it boils. If you eat a lot, you put on weight. If it doesn't rain for a long time, the earth gets very dry. If we go out with friends, we normally go to a restaurant. If I'm tired, I go to bed early.	If + present simple,	present simple.	50% possibility	100% certainty
If + present simple,	present simple.
50% possibility	100% certainty

The First Conditional

We use the first conditional to talk about a realistic situation in the present or future.

The structure of the first conditional is as follows:

If + present simple,	will + verb can + verb must + verb imperative form
50% possibility	100% certainty

Here are some examples:

If you're free later, we can go for a walk.

If they're hungry, I'll make some sandwiches.

If you're not back by 5pm, give me a ring.

If he studies hard, he'll do well in the exam.

				If we arrive late, we must get a taxi. He'll call if he needs help. Take a break if you're tired. Another way to make first conditional sentences is to use 'unless' which means 'only if' or 'except'. As with 'if', the word 'unless' can never be followed by 'will' but only by the present simple. For example: Unless you hurry up, you won't catch the bus. I'll carry on doing this work, unless my boss tells me to do something else. We'll stay at home unless the weather improves. The Second Conditional We use the second conditional to talk about improbable or impossible situations in the present or future. Here is the structure:

					<table border="1"><tr><td>If + past simple,</td><td>would + verb could + verb</td></tr><tr><td>0-5% possibility</td><td>100% certainty</td></tr></table> For example: If I had more time, I'd exercise more. (But I don't have more time so I don't.) If I were rich, I'd spend all my time travelling. (But I'm not rich so I can't.) If she saw a snake, she'd be terrified. If he didn't have to work late, he could go out with his girlfriend. What would you do if you were offered a job in Canada? You wouldn't have to walk everywhere if you bought a bike.	If + past simple,	would + verb could + verb	0-5% possibility	100% certainty
If + past simple,	would + verb could + verb
0-5% possibility	100% certainty

				A common expression used to give advice has the second conditional structure. The expression is 'If I were you, I'd..', meaning 'in your situation, this is what I would do'. For example: A: I've got a headache. B: If I were you, I'd take an aspirin. A: I don't understand this. B: If I were you, I'd ask your teacher for help. A: This order won't be delivered on time. B: If I were you, I'd phone the customer to let them know. The Third Conditional We use the third conditional to talk about impossible situations, as in the second conditional, in the past. We often use the third conditional to describe regrets. The structure is:

If + past perfect,	would have + past participle could have + past participle
0% possibility	100% certainty

Here are some examples:

If we had left earlier, we would have arrived on time.

If you hadn't forgotten her birthday, she wouldn't have been upset.

If they had booked earlier, they could have found better seats.

If I hadn't learnt English, I wouldn't have got this job.

What would you have studied if you hadn't done engineering?

They wouldn't have hired you if you hadn't had some experience abroad.

You could have helped me if you'd stayed later.

Mixed Conditionals

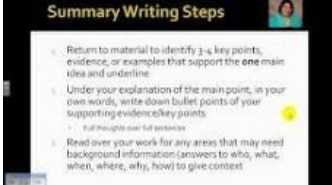

It's possible to combine the second and third conditional in one sentence when we want to make a hypothesis about the past that has a consequence in the present. In this case, the structure is:

If + past perfect,	would+ verb could + verb
0% possibility	100% certainty

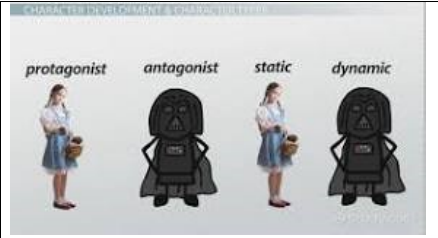

Here are some examples:

If you'd studied harder, you'd be at a higher level now.

					We'd be lying on a beach now if we hadn't missed the plane. They'd have much more confidence if they hadn't lost so many matches. What would you be doing now if you hadn't decided to study?
